MY MORNIN' NAP.

On the sunny side of forty, when my bones was full o' sap, I didn't care so mighty much about my mornin' nap. I'd like to beat the sun himself a gittin' out o' bed. An' watch him fling his banners up o' yaller an' o' red. An' see the shadows sneak away an' hide about the trees. An' hear the birds a-chatterin' an' feel the mornin' breeze. An' the whole year round, I'd never fail to rouse. As I look back on the years, I'd never fail to rouse. But many a time I've changed since then an' now I'm a different man. I've changed the most o' all, I guess. I'm now my mornin' nap. It's the best thing I got all day. I don't care any more. There ain't no birds an' no sun in all the earthly world. Kin drive away my rheumatism an' lumber up my legs. Kin drive away my mornin' nap, in a gentle sort o' way. While I'm a-cuddlin' the breakfast an' the hired man milks the cows.

IN SPITE OF HIMSELF.

Here's the man that'll show us how to do it. Come along, Lawrie, old fellow; you're just in time. We're trying to show the mares, and you're the boy to show us what she can do. Up with you, and give us a touch of Mazepa.

Thus shouted a group of ruddy, stalwart young fellows of unmistakable sporting appearance, who were assembled in the stable yard of an old country house in one of the southwestern counties.

Squire McCallister, their host, had just bought a high-spirited young sorrel, as skittish and full of tricks as any filly, which had been very appropriately named "Coquette" by her new master. Her name had formerly been "Nightmare," but to this the squire strongly objected, arguing, with some show of reason, that a nightmare could not be shaken off by anybody, whereas his mare shook off everybody.

This last statement was certainly no more than the truth. Somewhere or other Coquette and her rider (whoever he might be) were pretty sure to part company before they had been very long together; and among her many victims was her late owner himself, who, resenting the broken heel which he owed to her capriciousness, had got rid of her immediately after his mishap.

The same ill success had just attended one of the young Minards who had gathered around Coquette in the stable yard of Fairview Hall. Being a very fast horseman, he had backed up to keep his saddle in spite of all that the mare could do to unsettle him, but he was found out that he had not his match. After a hard struggle, Coquette had the best of it, and Fred Fanshawe was laid sprawling on his back in the dust, from which he had just arisen when a fresh actor appeared on the scene.

This new comer was the "lawrie" so vociferously greeted by the assembled sportsmen, to all of whom he seemed well known. He was a hardy, good-looking fellow, rather stout, looking young fellow of two and twenty.

In spite of his slender frame and somewhat foppish appearance, Lawrence Berkeley was a fair pedestrian, a good shot, and something of a gymnast as well; and he had contrived to persuade himself that he was a good rider into the bargain. But his horses thought otherwise, and he had already paid for this delusion with more than one awkward fall.

Warned by these catastrophes, our hero had lately purchased a very quiet and well-broken beast, which he had brought with him to the Hall. On this safe "mount" he figured creditably enough, but two or three of his friends who were in the secret of his inferior horsemanship were constantly on the watch for a chance of getting some fun out of it. Such a chance as they thought, was now offered to them, and they lost no time in turning it to account.

"Come along, Berkeley!" cried one. "This fellow, Fanshawe seems to think that nobody knows anything about riding except himself; but you'll show him a thing or two, won't you, old boy?"

"Be merciful to the poor beast, though," laughed another; "and don't run it right through with those spurs of yours. By Jove! they're big enough to roast a goose on."

This last remark of "chaff" was not wholly undeserved. Lawrence Berkeley always arrayed himself in the most extravagant style, as if with a vague hope that his mazy coat and cap and his irreproachable, "tops" might refuse the art of riding into him by innate virtue of their own. But on this particular occasion his "get-up" was smarter than ever, and he had supplemented it with a pair of enormous Mexican spurs, at least twice as long as any worn in England, which their wagging owner (a friend for whose sporting knowledge our hero had a great respect) had mischievously persuaded him to wear.

It may be noted that one of the most objectionable habits of this formidable mare was a way which she had of suddenly assuming a meek and gentle air, and putting herself in attitude of perfect obedience so naturally as to deceive any one save an experienced jockey.

This was just what she did now; and thus as Berkeley had not come up in time to witness her summary disposal of Fred Fanshawe, all that he saw was a seemingly quiet and well-trained animal, which his friends were inviting him to ride. Such an opportunity of making (as he thought) a safe and easy display of the horsemanship which he supposed himself to possess was just to his mind; and in a twinkling he had sprung into the saddle and seized the reins.

For a moment the capricious animal remained perfectly motionless, as if unconscious of her rider's very existence; for what made her pranks doubly dangerous was that she never gave the slightest warning of them before they came. And then (as a young Irish groom remarked with a grin) "the fun began in earnest."

In an instant all four feet of the sorrel were off the ground, and there followed a series of capers such as none of the spectators had ever seen before. She reared up on her hind legs till every one thought she must fall backward and crush her rider beneath her. She put her head down between her fore legs and lashed out behind till she made all the lookers-on jump aside like galvanized frogs. She went through a series of "back-jumps" worthy of a genuine Australian, and performed a half a dozen antics, one worse than another, which—as one of the spectators admiringly remarked—"would have taken the shine out of a drunken grasshopper."

But, to the unbounded amazement of all who were aware of Berkeley's lack of horsemanship, and the great admiration of those who were not, our hero kept his seat, in defiance of all these wild gambols, as firmly as if (like Baron Munchausen's) land busily he had taken root in the horse's body.

Nothing that the sorrel could do availed to shake him in the least; and Fred Fanshawe stared at him (as well he might) to see the beast that had thrown him mastered by a man whom he had never credited with being able to ride at all.

Berkeley's resistance seemed to infuriate the spirited mare, which grew more and more violent every moment. But for this, as well as for Lawrence's wonderful success in keeping his seat, there was a very good reason.

Our hero's long limbs, grasping closely the sides of his steed, had hitched the curved ends of his huge spurs into each other in such a way as to hold him on as firmly as if he had been strapped to the saddle.

Naturally enough the consequent pressure of the spurs against her flanks galled the spirited mare to fury; and in her rage at finding herself unable to get rid of her tormentor, she suddenly made a frantic dash through the gate, and tore away madly over the open country beyond.

"By Jove! he'll be killed as sure as a gun!" cried Fred Fanshawe, glancing after him with a look of dismay. "We must follow him and at once!" shouted another man. "Come along sharp!"

And in a trice they were all mounted, and dashing at full speed after their luckless comrade, who was indeed giving them a touch of Mazepa in a way of which he had dreamed.

Meanwhile Berkeley was having such a gallop as he had never had before. The maddened sorrel flew like an arrow "over hedge and ditch, through swamp and stream" like the spectre horse of the old ballad; and Lawrence, unable to free himself, and knowing that he must certainly break a limb if the mare were to fall with him, did not enjoy his ride quite so much as he might have done.

He was just beginning to give himself up for lost, and to vow that if he could not escape this time, he would leave horses alone for the rest of his life, when the affair took an unexpected turn.

Coquette had rushed recklessly into a patch of deep and boggy ground, the soft clinging mire of which (wherein she sank almost up to her haunches) effectually checked her speed; and by the time she had struggled through it she was glad enough to stand still.

In the meantime Lawrence had at length succeeded in unclenching, by a desperate effort, his interlocked spurs, thus relieving the mare from their irritating pressure; and then, finding that his "ferry, untamed steed" was pretty thoroughly tamed for the time being, he rode back towards the Hall at a leisurely pace. But he was barely half-way thither when a loud shout made him turn his head, and he saw coming up at a rapid rate, the whole party of his friends, who, delighted at finding him still alive and unhurt, surrounded him with shouts of boisterous welcome, and praised him up to the skies for his skill and courage, having no suspicion whatever of the real truth.

The most singular part of the whole story, however, was that this rough experience actually made a horseman of Lawrence Berkeley after all. What with the scare given him by his perilous ride, and what with his wish to retain the credit which his mastery of the redoubtable Coquette had earned him, our hero thenceforth applied himself with such energy to the improving of his horsemanship that he eventually became quite as good a rider as any of those who had formerly laughed at him.—Saturday Evening Post.

TROOPS ORDERED OUT.

THE ENTIRE STATE MILITIA AT HOMESTEAD.

Governor Pattison Takes This Action in Response to Another Appeal from Sheriff McLeary—Homestead Strikers Greatly Excited Upon Receipt of the News.

Sent the Soldiers.

The entire division of the National Guard of Pennsylvania, about 8,000 men, has been ordered to Homestead to support Sheriff McLeary in suppressing the riots at that place. This action of the Governor was taken in response to an appeal from Sheriff McLeary, who had been ordered to suppress the riots at that place. This action of the Governor was taken in response to an appeal from Sheriff McLeary, who had been ordered to suppress the riots at that place.

Put the division on arms and move at once, with ammunition, to the support of the Sheriff of Allegheny County, at Homestead. Maintain the peace. Protect all persons in their rights under the constitution and laws of the State. Communicate to me further particulars.

ROBERT E. PATTERSON, Governor.

To Sheriff McLeary, the following telegram was sent:

William H. McLeary, Sheriff of Allegheny County, Pittsburgh.

Have ordered Maj. Gen. George R. Snowden with a division of National Guard of Pennsylvania to your support at once. Put yourself in communication with him. Communicate to me further particulars.

ROBERT E. PATTERSON, Governor.

Gen. Snowden, with the Adjutant General and Quartermaster General, at once proceeded to formulate the orders for the mobilization of the troops.

The news that the Governor had ordered out the State troops created great excitement at Homestead. It was not received until 11 o'clock at night, and most of the strikers had gone to bed. The news was spread on the streets, and the strikers gathered together and discussed the meaning of the new move.

"Will the soldiers protect the 'black sheep' if Carnegie tries to lay with non-union men?" was the chief question. Many of the men who lingered on the streets refused to believe that the troops had been called out and said that it was like all of the wild rumors that had been circulated every night. The hot-headed strikers were at first disposed to be a little defiant, and there were occasional declarations that even the militia would be opposed, but when it was learned that the division ordered out was composed of men, the declarations promptly gave way to, "Oh, well, we have lost the Pinkertons anyway; they did not dare to come," and thus consolation is found in the reflection that the most hated enemy of organized labor has been defeated and given up the battle.

BERKELEY POWDER EXPLOSION

Three White Men and Three Chinese Known to Have Been Killed.

The powder explosion at West Berkeley, Cal., proved to be not nearly so disastrous as reports had at first supposed. Six lives are now known to have been lost, three white men and three Chinese. Thousands of people visited the scene of the explosion from San Francisco and Oakland, and gazed wonderingly at the immense cavities dug in the side of the hill by the force of the explosion and at the wrecks of buildings. The damage to the powder and the chemical works is estimated at over $300,000, with probably $25,000 more damage done in San Francisco and Oakland by windows breaking. The proprietors of the powder works say they will not rebuild at West Berkeley, as it is too near the thickly inhabited sections.

Masculinities.

The Emperor of China has ten men to do nothing but carry his umbrella. "How can a woman tell?" is the title of a recent poem. "How can she help telling?" would be more appropriate.

WHAT OF THE WEATHER

FOSTER'S FORECASTS TELL THE STORY.

The Weather Will Continue Very Warm—Breeze in the Cotton Belt—Winter Will Be Late and Fall Wheat Should Be Sown Late.

Metereological Matters.

My last bulletin gave forecasts of the storm wave to cross the continent from 17th to 21st, and the next will reach the Pacific coast about the 23d, cross the Western mountains by the close of the 23d, the great central valleys from 24th to 25th, and the Eastern States about the 27th.

The weather will continue to average very warm, and the principal storm waves and rainfalls will range northward. Portions of the cotton belt will suffer greatly from drought, while in some of the Upper Mississippi Valley States excessive rains will occur.

A good stage of water for navigation purposes will continue in the Mississippi, Missouri and Ohio rivers.

In the Northern States the time for fall plowing is near at hand, and the ground is expected to be in good condition, with mid-time sufficient to give fall crops a good start. Winter will come late, we will have a late fall, and the winter crops will make a large growth before the first of December, therefore where a large growth of fall wheat is not desired, it will be best to sow late.

In the Southern States the weather will be more favorable to winter gardening than last winter was.

Local Forecasts.

Weather changes more from west to east across the continent, and each local forecast is made for within 250 miles east and west of the magnetic meridian mentioned, and for all the country between 25 and 30 degrees of north latitude. These local weather changes will occur within twenty-four hours before or after sunset of the date given.

The Earth's Geology.

If the atmosphere at one time contained all the carbon now stored away in the earth, it is claimed that plant life would then have grown 1,000 times more rapidly than now, because carbon, in the condition of carbonic acid, is the food of plants. That may be true, but I do not believe it.

The sunshine is necessary to the growth of plant life, but too much sunshine will kill the plant. Water is necessary to plant life, but too much water will destroy it. Carbonic acid is necessary to plant life, but let us increase the amount now in the atmosphere 1,000 times, and who will say that it would not destroy plant life?

The Upan valley in Java is not necessary a desert, but as no vegetable grows there, it is believed that the carbonic acid, which is eighteen feet deep, is the cause of its bare fields.

Things are what they seem. The beautiful evening star we see following the sun as it sinks in the west is not supposed to be on fire, but none of our astronomers hold that Venus is a burning world. In fact, there is no proof that any of the planets contain more heat than does the earth, while it is well known that Jupiter and Saturn shine, to some extent, of their own light. In fact, the earth shines of its own light through its aura, or northern lights, and these lights will yet be recognized as of the same nature as the inherent light of Jupiter, Saturn and the sun.

Every astronomer declares that the moon is a burned out, dead body, devoid of water, and without an atmosphere, a cold and decaying world. But Prof. Proctor says that the moon has a perceptive influence on our magnetic poles, and as magnetism is the source of light and heat, the magnetism, light and heat of our earth are affected by the cold, dead moon.

Then it is not necessary that the sun be a hot body, for his magnetism is all sufficient to produce the light and heat in our atmosphere. The supposed inherent heat of the sun is what leads geologists to the theory that the earth was once a burning body, as the sun now is.

We cannot have a correct basis for weather changes till we arrive at a correct theory as to the physical forces and the building of a universe, and all arguments on geology and physical astronomy are directed toward the overthrow of the false basis upon which these two sciences are placed. When I shall have shown the earth could not have come to its present condition along the lines pointed out by astronomers and geologists, I will then put forth the only true basis on which to build the sciences of physical astronomy, geology, and meteorology.

RECENTLY A NEWS DISPATCH FROM FAIRFIELD TOLD OF OSCAR BELKNAP SETTLING HIS AFFAIRS ON FIRE AND LAUGHING AMUSINGLY AT HER TORTURE.

RECENTLY A NEWS DISPATCH FROM FAIRFIELD TOLD OF OSCAR BELKNAP SETTLING HIS AFFAIRS ON FIRE AND LAUGHING AMUSINGLY AT HER TORTURE. Mrs. Belknap, in a card to the Chicago Inter Ocean, says: "Your correspondent says they once had trouble and separated, but Belknap had persuaded his wife to return to him. This is a mistake. We had never separated prior to the day before the time in question, and he did not persuade me back at this time, as my story will show. The day before we were separated, I went out to my father's with my nephew, not thinking of leaving him, but wanting him to think so. Oscar came out to my father's house in the evening where I was, telling me he did not intend to leave me, but was nearly there before he knew it. We had some talk about our troubles and we both got angry, then became settled again, and during this conversation I made up my mind I would not go back only for my things. Oscar told me I could have them. In the morning myself and some of my folks went to where we had been living after my things. Oscar met my sister and myself at the back door. My sister Alice said she could not come in, she had done too much against him. She did not go in, and I did, telling Oscar all I wanted was my things, as he had told me the evening before I could have them. He said I could not have them, and he would smash them first. His father said I could have them if I wanted them. I then went to ripping some carpet in the hall; he stepped up and myself at the back door. We stayed a minute, then we stepped into the room, sat down on the side of the bed and talked a while. Oscar then got up, walked across the room and sat down in a chair folding his arms on the back and laying his head on them. I went to him and stroked his hair with my hands and talked to him. He then got up, stood by me and put his arm around me, and in a very short time I saw my clothes were on fire. Oscar said, 'My God!' and lifted me in his arms onto the bed and pulled the bedding over to smother out the fire. I screamed, his father and all of my folks ran in and put out the fire. Oscar ran when they all came in, but with a 'domine laugh' that any one heard, and has not been seen or heard of since that I know of. I can say I firmly believe him to be insane, as I have noticed it on him for quite a while, and I could see he had grown worse in the last few days. I am sure he thought too much of me if he was in his right mind. He had some serious trouble nearly a year ago and I think this worked on his mind constantly."

BLOWING UP BRIDGES.

WORK OF THE RIGIDOUS IDAHO MINERS.

Troops Are Delayed—Threats of a Massacre of Non-Union Men if Soldiers Approach—Mines Charged with Dynamite and Fuses Attached.

Preparing to Fight.

A Boise City (Idaho) dispatch says: Gov. Willey has issued a proclamation closing Shoshone County under martial law. Word has been received that three companies of Federal troops from Missouri have arrived at Mullain. The other troops have not been heard from. Ady Gen. Curtis, who is in command for the State and who went to Coeur d'Alene in advance of the outbreak, has not been heard from and it is feared that he has fallen into the hands of the strikers. A dispatch to the Governor from Judge H. H. Spokane says that union men drove 132 non-union miners out, firing on them and killing two.

At Portland, Ore., the Union Pacific Company has received word from Coeur d'Alene that the Northern Pacific Railroad bridge, together with several hundred feet of track, was blown up by strikers west of Mullain. The company is preparing to take all non-union men out of the mines to Tokan. The union men assert that the moment troops appear on the scene they will blow up Bunker Hill, Sullivan, Sierra Nevada and Gem mines. The burning of the bridge near Mullain will hold troops out from Tacoma and their tracks and bridges have been destroyed in the vicinity of Mullain and Wallace, and that wires have been cut. They will hold the country responsible. Another message to the Governor from Coeur d'Alene says that non-union men have been blown up and that the union men propose to fight the troops to the death.

A special train over the Union Pacific left Portland, bearing 200 troops of the 10th Cavalry from Vancouver, Wash., for Coeur d'Alene. A special train over the Union Pacific arrived at Pendleton, bearing troops from Idaho. Two companies have left Fort Sherman for the scene of the trouble. In all about 700 United States troops and militia are on their way to the mines.

Gen. Schofield has ordered an additional force to the Coeur d'Alene district. The company from Fort Vancouver, Washington, a troop of cavalry and six companies of infantry from Vancouver barracks, Washington. These troops, with those previously ordered from Fort Sherman and Fort Meade, will give Coeur d'Alene an active force of nearly 800 men.

WILL CLOSE SUNDAY.

The Senate Takes Positive Action in the Matter.

The United States, by a vote of 51 to 14, has approved the $5,000,000 appropriation in aid of the World's Fair. Attached to the appropriation is the following proviso: "That the appropriation provided in this act shall be upon condition that the said World's Columbian Exposition shall be closed on the first day of the week, commonly called Sunday."

Another condition of equal importance has been attached, although it is likely to be struck out on a reconsideration. It is as follows: "Provided, the sale of intoxicating liquors on the Exposition grounds shall be prohibited, except for medical, botanical, or scientific purposes."

The final contest on the World's Fair items came up in the Senate Wednesday afternoon as the climax to the three successive days of debate which have been given the subject. Through a motion of the Senate itself, but before the committee of the whole for proliminary revision and amendments. It was in this committee of the whole that the important action was taken, so that there is still opportunity for change when the committee of the whole reports to the full Senate. The vote was so decided, however, that there is no possibility of change upon the $5,000,000 appropriation or upon the Sunday question.

According to a Washington dispatch, there is a certain effort will be made to strike out the liquor prohibition, and, as this was passed by only two majority, the prospects are that the prohibition will be eliminated. The two Illinois Senators who led the liquor prohibition have determined to change their votes, which is sufficient to change the narrow majority which was given on the first vote.

REMINISCENCES.

We hear of men sowing wild oats, but who ever heard of a woman sowing anything but tears.

MISS TOMPKINS says that every unmarried lady of forty has passed the Cup of Good Hope.

AN Indiana woman claims to have been a comet for seventy years. A rather protracted stay.

GLYNES COUNTY, GA., has a woman hermit who has only spoken to three persons in eighty years.

DANIEL BAUGLE, SR., a resident of Jeffersonville, Ind., claims to be 103 years old. He is in good health.

Mrs. KIMBALL, of San Francisco, asked for a divorce because her husband asked her to change her name to "Mrs. Kimball" and she refused.

A YOUNG man declares that his sweetheart is so tender-hearted that she cannot be persuaded to strike a light.

WHEN a woman declares she has ceased loving you, she means she is going to take a new start and love you more than ever.

PLAYING FOUR-HANDED PILES ON THE JACOBI. The favorite and almost sole (save dressing) amusement of the Princess of Wales.

THERE is no special style in engraving engagements rings. A spider's web, with a fly in it has been suggested as a pretty device.

A FRENCHMAN has succeeded, it is said, in producing an excellent driving belt parchmenting the leather instead of tanning it. The belts have greater durability and do not stretch.

NEWS OF OUR OWN IOWA

OCCURRENCES DURING THE PAST WEEK.

Religious Fight Settled—Marshalltown Jail Delivery in Broad Daylight—A Circus in Hard Luck—Coleman and Ryan Held—Coroner's Laid.

Record of the Week.

THE Mississippi River at Burlington is slowly receding. Lumber and other mills are resuming.

(GEORGE GALE, an Oaage liverman, was thrown by a runaway horse and probably fatally hurt.

THE body of Robert Page, the Boone boy drowned in the Des Moines River two weeks ago, was found sixty miles down the river. It had floated to and through the City of Des Moines without discovery, and was taken from the water ten miles below the city.

At Dubuque Coleman and Ryan, the Chicago safe-blowers, were held in $1,000 bail by United States Commissioner Hobbs for the Dickcayville (Wis.) postoffice job. They go to the Anamosa Penitentiary to await trial in December for the New Albany postoffice burglary.

THE Mississippi at Dubuque having failed to yield a sea serpent, the enterprising manager of a street car line announces the discovery of a subterranean sea several acres in extent, beneath Stewart Park, a pleasure resort near Dubuque, which forms the northern terminus of the road.

JUDGE MITCHELL, of the District Court at Chariton, decided the injunction case brought by the Chicago, Rock Island and Pacific against the Chicago, Fort Madison and Des Moines Railroad, to prevent the latter road from crossing the former at Libertyville. He dissolved the injunction, thus making another victory for the Chicago, Fort Madison and Des Moines Road.

CROWDS of Clarke County citizens gathered in Osceola to witness the laying of the corner-stone of the new Court House. A procession, consisting of uniformed ranks of K. P., I. O. O. F., A. A. R., Masonic Fraternity, W. R. C., and P. E. O. Societies, headed by the Murray Band, marched to the site of the court house. The exercises were conducted by the Masonic Fraternity, Ralph S. Phelps, Grand Master of Des Moines, having charge. The structure is to cost $45,000.

A TEMPEST in East Dubuque came to a happy conclusion. The Catholics reared a rectory and the Methodists, who owned the adjoining property, claimed the building was over the line. They fenced it up, and the priest had the preacher and five elders arrested for malicious trespass. The Catholics created so much feeling, and both sides became alarmed, and while the criminal trials were pending, made a settlement, the Catholics withdrawing the prosecutions and paying $400 costs.

AT Marshalltown a daring jail delivery occurred. Al Wood, awaiting the action of the grand jury for violating the liquor law, Jack Barkaway and James Patsky for burglary, sawed their way through the jail roof and escaped by looping a half-inch rope around the chimney at 11 o'clock in the morning with scores of people in sight. The Sheriff and posse were on the track of the fugitives in five minutes and recaptured Wood about noon. Barkaway was caught later, and slashed his guard with a razor.

RECENTLY A NEWS DISPATCH FROM FAIRFIELD TOLD OF OSCAR BELKNAP SETTLING HIS AFFAIRS ON FIRE AND LAUGHING AMUSINGLY AT HER TORTURE. Mrs. Belknap, in a card to the Chicago Inter Ocean, says: "Your correspondent says they once had trouble and separated, but Belknap had persuaded his wife to return to him. This is a mistake. We had never separated prior to the day before the time in question, and he did not persuade me back at this time, as my story will show. The day before we were separated, I went out to my father's with my nephew, not thinking of leaving him, but wanting him to think so. Oscar came out to my father's house in the evening where I was, telling me he did not intend to leave me, but was nearly there before he knew it. We had some talk about our troubles and we both got angry, then became settled again, and during this conversation I made up my mind I would not go back only for my things. Oscar told me I could have them. In the morning myself and some of my folks went to where we had been living after my things. Oscar met my sister and myself at the back door. My sister Alice said she could not come in, she had done too much against him. She did not go in, and I did, telling Oscar all I wanted was my things

Westgate boys were over here Sunday playing ball with our nine. The Maynard nine won the game 30 to 33.

H. Barnholt sold a fine mare to some eastern parties who were here buying horses. Mr. Proctor sold one to the same parties.

McElree's Wine of Cardui, a Tonic for Women.

We are going to say a few words in regard to the Sunday base ball playing and other sports on Sunday. Some of our readers may differ with us but this is our true conviction, that it is not right and should not be allowed and a good many of our people are of the same opinion as we have heard them condemn and protest against it. There is plenty of time during the week for such sports. Now boys don't do it for it is breaking the moral law as well as the civil law.

A CITIZEN.

Ask Henry F. Lett about his artificial fish pond. The boys have great sport catching the tiny article of diet. Henry will probably stock the pond with some fine bull heads as there has been some correspondence with the state fish commissioners to that effect.

The ladies' aid society of the M. E. church cleared $5.83 by the sale of ice cream last Saturday. For the coming Saturday they have engaged a professional ice cream maker and hope to do much better this time. They will serve ice cream and cake every Saturday.

The matinee at Pemberton Park was well attended Saturday and there was some very fine trotting and running races also foot races. We are promised that this week there will be some special races and there will be some fast horses there. Come one, come everybody and have a good time.

The Maynard dramatic club under the direction of N. W. Simmons was greeted with good houses on last Friday and Saturday evenings. On Friday evening the club played the ever popular play Ten Nights in a Bar Room.

All played their parts well. Mr. Simmons made an exceptional fine Joe Morgan and the character as presented by him was a study as the lines were recited with more effect than any we have ever heard and we have heard many. He is a careful and conscientious actor and while his part was a difficult one it was plain to be seen that when he first stepped on to the stage that he was master of the situation.

Saturday evening was given Millicent and to say that it was a very fine play well acted would be putting it mild. The parts were so well taken that it would be an injustice to make special mention of any one in particular. In short the entertainments were thoroughly enjoyed by all who attended, and their success reflects great credit on the work done both by the club and Mr. Simmons and such both to Mr. Simmons and the club in their future efforts is earnest wish of the News.
